COMMUNITY PARTICIPATORY ADVISORY BOARD

Mission

---

JHU CFAR CPAB strives to be a link between the community and JHU research.

It is our mission “to provide strategic input to the CFAR Baltimore HIV Collaboratory in its aims of refocusing attention on the Baltimore HIV epidemic within the University and the city.”

General Information

The Community Participatory Advisory Board (CPAB) is comprised of 15 local stakeholders from a cross-section of community-based organizations, advocates, academic institutions, public health institutions, in addition to state and local health department representatives.

Board Requirements

The CPAB meets quarterly to discuss pending issues.

The CPAB is charged with the Following

- .Raise issues of relevance to the community as they relate to HIV prevention and treatment.
- Provide CFAR feedback to projects and proposals, as requested.
- Advise on the Bridging the Gap Symposium.
- Assist in the development of community dissemination and outreach strategies for research findings related to HIV prevention, care and treatment with patients, clinicians, caregivers, HIV/AIDS service providers, & interested persons in the community.
- Each member is required to serve on one CPAB subcommittee.
